

"The breezes taste
Of apple peel.
The air is full
Of smells to feel-
Ripe fruit, old footballs,
Burning brush,
New books, erasers,
Chalk, and such.
The bee, his hive,
Well-honeyed hum,
And Mother cuts
Chrysanthemums.
Like plates washed clean
With suds, the days
Are polished with
A morning haze. "

- John Updike, September

New vs old

In the past, traditional banking involved driving to an actual bank during specific hours and talking to a bank teller. Physical paper checks and deposits were necessary in order to receive money. It also required lines, a transaction fee, stamps, and other situations which cost time and money. In order to buy something, many people carried with them multiple credit and debit cards along with cash and coins. Traditional banking included physical objects and time, which some people felt was an inconvenience.

Today, new technology is constantly being created and implemented into our daily lives. With these advancements come new ways to spend money. With the development of better internet and iPhones, many banks have shifted from traditional banking to online banking. People no longer have to drive to a bank at specific times in order to cash in a deposit or manage their bank accounts. Instead, they are able to check everything whenever they want as long as they have internet. Apple Pay, PayPal, and Square all replace the need for a person to carry a physical card, and they now can use their phones to pay for their purchases. Online shopping gives the shopper the ability to buy whatever they want immediately instead of driving to a store and waiting in a long line. While not necessarily better, many people considered the saved time and less cost worth losing the interactions with an actual person.

What are your thoughts?

Cash is king or plastic money and home delivery is the way to go?

Each golf ball was sold for $2 or 6 for $10. All the purchased numbers were placed into a bucket. The bucket was dumped and the person closest to the “hole in one” or colored paper circle on the floor was the winner.

The winner of the 50/50 golf ball drop was family member Bobbi Akers!

She won $84 but donated half of that back to Alzheimer's!
